

Distinguishing features of the RealUnit share token

	1. Issuer	2. Backing	3. Anchoring of value	4. Stability	5. Yield
Swiss Francs (CHF)	SNB Fiat money	Credit system Government debt	Monetary policy Influenced by Fed/ECB Over-indebted system	Nominally stable Loss of purchasing power	Dependent on the interest rate policy of the SNB
Stablecoins (USD)	Private providers such as Tether or Circle Inc.	Predominantly backed by government bonds and current account balances held at banks	US Dollar	Nominally stable, real purchasing power loss in line with the base currency	No interest income for stablecoin holders
RealUnit Token (REALU)	RealUnit Schweiz AG, Baar	Invested by performance-oriented and real, tangible assets -> see actual Portfolio	Intrinsic value Premium capital increase Discount capital reduction	Actually stable Diversification into different asset classes	Higher excess return than Switzerland's inflation-adjusted GDP growth. -> Historical RealUnit Performance
Real Estate Token	Various private issuers	Real estate investments	Intrinsic value, dependent on market prices	Dependent on interest rates and on the real estate market	Share of rent income, 2 – 3%
Gold Token	Various private issuers	Paper gold or physical gold backing	Intrinsic value, dependent on market price	No.1 safe haven asset	Crisis resistant
Bitcoin (BTC)	Decentralised parallel currency with miners and programmers	None	Fixed supply of 21 million units and deflationary issuance	Very volatile and unstable	Speculative
Ethereum (ETH)	Decentralised issuance by "validators"	None Open Source Network	Supply and Demand	Very volatile and unstable	Staking Rewards

Legend of colours:

Yellow = state money (medium of exchange) Green = backed real assets (investment vehicle) Red = cryptocurrencies (speculative instrument)